NEW ADHERENT MEMBER OF COPANT
THE BRITISH STANDARDS INSTITUTION JOINS US

The British Standards Institution (BSI) established in 1901, as one of the first standards bodies in the world, recently joined our regional organization as an Adherent Member, and we will like to give them a warm welcome.

Today BSI is a non-profit distributing organization which offers global services in the linked fields of standards, system assessment, product certification, training and advisory services, helping organizations to improve performance, reduce risk and achieve sustainable growth in 150 countries worldwide.

BSI is the UK member of the International Organization for Standardization (ISO), the International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC), the European Committee for Standardization (CEN), the European Committee for Electrotechnical Standardization (CENELEC) and the European Telecommunications Standard Institute (ETSI).

BSI has more than 10,000 expert committee members participating in 1,200 national technical committees and subcommittees. In total, they support more than 190 secretariats of International and European committees. BSI also holds permanent seats in the ISO Council, the ISO Technical Management Board (TMB), the IEC Council Board and the IEC Standards Management Board (SMB).

BSI is, therefore, not only well-placed to contribute to the development of standardization and related activities of COPANT, and to promote their economic and commercial benefits, but is fully committed, as an international partner, to the aims of COPANT to facilitate trade between its members, and with other regions and to improve member’s participation in international standardization.
